

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A chip simulation technique includes describing a representation of a first simulation model to a graphical user interface using hardware descriptions stored in a database
5 then receiving responses of the first simulation model to a first signal applied to the model. A second simulation model is subsequently described to the same graphical user interface.

20200925 10:07:02